As the River Flows

Ryan Meeboer

This lyrical piece is composed using ternary (ABA) form and gives every section an opportunity to shine. Filled with rich use of harmony and a flowing melody, As the River Flows is a great way to teach a band the expressive style.

After the introduction sets up the mood of the piece, the first melody is brought in by a single alto saxophone, supported by the clarinets. The trumpets introduce the second melody at measure 21, with a brass choir supporting them. The winds add some motion at measure 29, as the piece builds up to the contrasting return of the A melody and measure 37. Be sure that there is a sudden drop in dynamics at this time.

The piece then builds up again at measure 45, to close with a beautiful flute melody, backed up by a clarinet drone. Be sure this melody is easily heard and is not covered up by the clarinets here.
