A PERSONAL NOTE

I have often loved celebrating the Easter and Christmas holidays at Grace Episcopal Church in Anniston, AL. Being founded in 1881, it is one of the oldest churches in Anniston, Alabama. The stone masonry of the exterior, the beautiful hardwood floors, the stained glass windows, and the incredible beauty of the altar make it a wonderful place to celebrate those events.

PROGRAM NOTES

A chilly Easter morning, with dogwood trees in bloom, their petals falling gracefully to the ground like snowflakes; the sounds of the church tower and the organ begin—these many expressions are heard in the beginning of this work. When we worship or contemplate our lives, there are many levels—exuberant and reverent. As the iconic Truman Capote once said, “More tears are shed over answered prayers than unanswered ones.” I have included the hymn “Old Hundredth” or “The Doxology” in this piece as a reflective “Conflict and Resolution.” There are many dark moments in life when we experience a “deficit of faith,” either in others or ourselves, when we simply do not know what is “next.” But many times in faith or confidence, we lift ourselves up, dust ourselves off, and carry on with the journey that is life.

NOTES TO CONDUCTOR

The introduction should be light and airy. If crotales are not available, bells can be substituted. The brass entrance at measure 13 should be “brassy,” but not with an edge to the tone. You may wish to stack the brass chords in some sections, starting with the octaves and the more familiar intervals, then add the color tones, such as sevenths or ninths.

At measure 49, the wood instruments, such as clarinets and marimba, should be balanced properly to achieve a unified sound. The bass and contrabass clarinet should be fairly prominent in measures 51–56 to build tension into the tonal change at measure 57.

The section beginning at measure 57 is the same tempo as the previous section. Conducting this section in “1” is an option. This section should also have the same “wooden” quality as the previous section. The diddles in the marimba should be present just enough to give a slight ripple to the chords. Medium-yarn mallets are recommended. Feel free to adjust the dynamics for the oboe solo. The solo has also been cued in the flute part if a suitable player is not available.

Beginning at measure 73, the mood changes yet again. A proper balance should be achieved between the bells, triangle, and French horns to the light and airy. Do not allow the French horns to become heavy. The trumpet soloist in this section should absolutely “sing!”

At measure 93, I have included the hymn “The Old Hundredth,” or as many know it, “The Doxology.” The French horns will need proper attention and balance in this section. The dynamics of the timpani part will need to be adjusted through this section until measure 116. The “pulse” of the timpani should be heard throughout this section. The fourth French horn part has been cued in the euphonium part for assistance, if needed. The flutes and clarinets throughout this section should be a mere echo. The wind chimes should also be light, like a mild breeze or remembrance. The trombone soloist should be present enough to reflect conflict. The solo was composed using the first few words of “Dies Irae” from the Requiem Mass—“The day of wrath, that day will dissolve the world...” The rubato at measure 113 should bring a sense of closure. At measure 116, allow the timpanist enough time to change the drum for the next section. You may wish to continue the wind chimes to cover any “noise” in the tuning process.

The Giocoso con spirito at measure 117 should be exuberant and festive. At measure 125, there is a short multiple-meter section. The tempo should remain the same between the meter changes. Again, the clarinets and marimba should be balanced to create a wooden quality.

At measure 141, there is a slight hemiola between the melodic voices and those in the accompaniment. Special attention may be needed in the snare drum part as to the feel and change. The chimes should be very present in this section.

Measure 157 should be absolutely “joyous” to the end. The bells and crotales should double here if available. Again at measure 162, you may wish to balance the chords in the brass for proper sound.

As always, feel free to adjust tempo and dynamics to suit your ensemble and performance venue. Best wishes for an uplifting performance!
